” Together with our guest from France we examined the effects of France’s colonial past and the present-day approach to this history. As we had previously known very little about French history, we found it really interesting.

” Europe meets School gives pupils an uncomplicated and low-threshold introduction to European topics. It is a plus for all ages and will help to keep the European idea alive.

Susanne Seiler, teacher at the Albert Schweitzer grammar school in Dillingen/Saar

Who organises Europe meets School?

The programme is coordinated by volunteer teams at over 35 university locations in Germany. ” I think that Europe meets School is a perfect opportunity to fill the idea of a united Europe with life – irrespective of any abstract political decisions. It allows insights into the cultures of other European countries, both for school pupils and guest students.
